

It only seems like yesterday that your little one was taking their first steps, and now they're in the first years at school.

As your child begins their school life, you'll further discover that any time you get to spend with them is precious.

You'll want to be sure that your work doesn't get in the way of being there for all the important events in their lives, like:

- Cheering them on at sports days
- Waving them off on their school trips
- Nursing them through illness
- Seeing them take on a starring role in the school play

Finding flexible work that fits around your child's daily school schedule and the numerous school holidays, including the long 12 week break during the summer months, can be tricky. More and more, parents are looking for alternative means to make extra money in order to cover the huge cost of childcare, but at the same time to have the flexibility to ensure they don't miss out on the key moments in their child's development.

Many mums and dads are now discovering that Kleeneze offers the perfect solution. Becoming a Kleeneze distributor and working from home means that you can have the best of both worlds, with the flexible working hours meaning that you can be there for your little one throughout their entire childhood.

The facts

- 34% of working parents say they don't feel able to exercise their legal right to request flexible hours
- 64% feel they are letting their children down by failing to strike the right balance and missing key events in their children's lives
- 37% believe the recession has made the situation worse and they feel under pressure to work more hours than ever before
- A recent survey by the Daycare Trust showed that childcare costs increased at a rate of 5% last year – that's 1.9% more than the rate of inflation.
- The typical weekly cost of a place for a child in a summer play scheme is £91.56 a week. With the average salary amounting to £479 a week, that means parents could be spending upwards of 20 per cent of their salary on childcare during the summer months.
- The typical cost for an after school club is £40 for 15 hours a week. With the school year lasting just under 35 weeks, that amounts to a total spend of £1,400 per year.

The Kleeneze solution

- Deliver and collect catalogues, place orders and deliver them to customers
- Follow a simple, proven system to build up a customer base that will provide the income you want for now and the future
- Choose to build up a team to boost your profits further and provide a residual income

Chrissy Sykes, an ex-health and safety assessor, found that Kleeneze offered her the opportunity to earn while also allowing plenty of time to care for her son. She said:

“I started running my Kleeneze business in February 2008 following the birth of my son. I found a lot of the part-time earning options that I came across required ridiculous investment or seemed unrealistic, but Kleeneze offered a practical and exciting prospect.”

“It soon became clear that I'd invested wisely; in my first full sales period, I hit the first bonus level of 10% on top of my sales and earned £265.64.

I then quickly decided I wanted to network and, with the help and support of my upline manager, I have started to build a great team.”

“I've been able to run my business comfortably around my family commitments and my part-time income has reached in excess of £700 per month. Kleeneze has given me a realistic earning option, where I'm able to combine part-time work with being a dedicated, full-time parent.”
